

SAVING

Users can name and save speeches they have started

Users can track progress saving multiple speeches

Users can download speeches to practice users can view the progress they have made users may want to track how long they have been practicing users may want to have testing/saving check points

METHODS

Users can practice with fill in the blanks

Users may want to time themselves users may want to split speeches into sections

Users may want to type out speech to test their knowledge users may want to record themselves practicing users may want to create study break timers to prevent burning out users may want to listen to meditation sounds (proven to boost memory)

Users may want to use a read aloud option, to practice pacing users may want to create flashcards sections users may want to take a "final test" to ensure they know the speech

SHARING

users may want to share progress with teachers, mentors, etc users may want to share speeches with classmates, group members, etc

Users may want to submit speeches to have them reviewed by critics users may want to upload their speeches to their own sites and/or drives users may want to collaborate and practice together in real time users may want to import scripts from other sources (movie scripts, play scripts, etc) users may want to share recorded presentation of speeches

DISPLAY

users may want to memorize something in a different language from their preferred users may want to set a preferred language users may want to change the amount of blanks to fill in (level of difficulty)

Users may want to change the size of the font users may want to choose between formats users may prefer different light settings (dark mode, light mode, yellow, etc) users may want a "continue working section" and a "finished" section users may want to rearrange and sort saved speeches

